

The Top Exhibitions To See In London: March 2024

By Tabish Khan

For more from London's art world, sign up for our new (free) newsletter and community: Londonist: Urban Palette.

Looking for an awesome London exhibition this March? Here's our roundup of must-see shows in the capital, plus two additions from outside of London.

Short run events

Cecilia Charlton's work from Collect 2023. Photo: David Parry, PA Media.

There are plenty of art fairs to keep us busy in March, kicking off with Collect 2024 at Somerset House (1-3 March, £21-£27) bringing together top tier contemporary craft and design — beautiful objects abound. If your taste lies more with emerging artists, you can buy direct from them at The Other Art Fair at Truman Brewery (7-10 March, £8) or from an international array of galleries at Affordable Art Fair, Battersea (6-10 March, £14, more details above). We end the month back at Somerset House for the London Original Print Fair (21-24 March, £18) which specialises in prints from emerging artists right through to big names like Grayson Perry and David Hockney.

If exhibitions are more your jam, head to Bermondsey Project Space for the brilliantly titled Transparent as a Dragonfly (4-9 March, free), named after a line from a book by Italo Calvino and organised by Arte Borgo and ArtCan* to mark 100 years since Calvino's birth. It brings together a mix of almost 40 artists based across Europe.

CasildArt open a new gallery space in Connaught Village, and to celebrate the opening they've invited women from diverse backgrounds to launch a salon hang exhibition to kick off their programme (15-24 March, free)